
Posted by stevebullman - 03/01/2004 02:36pm

well in england about 4 , if you're lucky

=====

Slingshot

Posted by Knothead - 02/26/2004 09:22pm

Ever on the lookout for climbing gear, I ran across these guys at a Hamfest in Richmond, VA:

<http://www.ezhang.com/>

They make a wrist-braced slingshot with a fishing reel attached. Hams use it for setting antennas.

It's a bit pricey, but well constructed and very comfortable to use. On their website, there's a calendar of Hamfests they'll be visiting. If you catch them at one, they'll probably give you the "show special price".

Regards all,
-Knothead

=====

Slingshot

Posted by Harry W. Barnhurst - 02/27/2004 01:17pm

Yeah but the ad says "no climbing trees" where is the fun in that. Just kidding. I know of some climbers that have been experimenting with this or one like it. I have not as I am still doing it the good old fashioned way and I haven't had the need to get that first pitch higher than I can throw. But you never know what tomorrow will bring.

I hope you don't mind my kidding with you! Have a great weekend.

=====

Posted by stevebullman - 02/28/2004 06:49am

i'm spectical if the fishing reel is really necessary, if not you could just get a black widow catapault for £10 and do just the same job

=====

Posted by JimK - 02/29/2004 08:21pm

Steve,

Can you convert your £10 into the universal conversion rate: how many beers does that buy?

Regards,
Jim

=====

Posted by redpanda - 03/10/2004 04:58am

do you know whats amazing?
that ezhang website says it has received 67,934 hits....unreal!

=====

