

---

Welcome to TCI's International Forum!

Posted by Patty Jenkins - 09/24/2005 12:38pm

---

Welcome to TCI's new "International" message forum! Since the TCI message board has participants from all over the world, we want our friends in countries outside the U.S. to have a place to bring tree-climbing issues that are specific to the country where you live to our community as a whole.

Please don't be shy! We understand that people who don't speak English as a native language sometimes have a hard time writing it. We're sure that everyone who posts here--including our English-speaking participants--will try their best to be understood by all, and that everyone will be patient with language barriers.

We look forward to broadening our discussion of tree climbing and learning from our tree-climbing friends worldwide.

On behalf of TCI and its membership,
Patty Jenkins

---

C'est Formidable!

Posted by JimK - 09/25/2005 01:51am

---

Je ne suis pas un estranger mais je vais ecrire ici. J'adore les arbres, et j'aime bien de gripper. C'est dommage mais je n'ai pas le faire en France ou Canada. Per chance je vais a France encore je vais gripper bien sure.

I'm not a foreigner, but I will write here. I adore trees and I like very well to climb. It's sad but I haven't done it in France or Canada. If lucky, I will go to France again (and) I will climb for sure.

Cordialement,
JimK

Maintenez en Plein Forme dedans Les Arbres!
Stay in top form in the trees.

---

Muto Legal!

Posted by JimK - 09/25/2005 02:01am

---

Eu acho qui eu vou escalada arvores. Serimente eu tenho uma pergunta. Onde sao os povos de America sul? Eu estou na busca da garota de Ipanema. Eu preciso um chopp.

I believe that I'm going to climb trees. Seriously, I have a question. Where are the people from South America?

I need a Brazilian draft beer.

Ate logo
Later

JimK

Eu vou voltar.
I shall return

---

English, too, please!

Posted by Patty Jenkins - 09/25/2005 10:13am

---

Thanks for writing your messages in languages other than English, Jim. Please also write them in English--we really do want this forum to be accessible to everyone!

Patty

---

---

Share our love and different experience

Posted by Elliot Su - 09/25/2005 10:38pm

---

Thanks for creating a "International Forum".this must be interesting for people who out side USA.

Lot's of climbing experience different from climbing in USA to report for our friends. such as we have 7 species of killer bee and many poison snake species on the trees.

Let's share our diffrent experience to each other.

I appreciate TCI creating this forum.What ever you are from all over the world,please typing in English to have everybody understand.

Best Regard

Elliot Su / Tree Climbing Taiwan

=====

Posted by JimK - 09/28/2005 10:05pm

---

English translation provided...sorry...I have a different sense of humor.

Google can translate foreign text provided the accent marks are typed and you can guess the language of origin.

=====

Tambien En Español!

Posted by Oldtimer - 09/29/2005 10:04am

---

Es muy bueno tener un sitio en la red donde se pueda ver informacion en varios idiomas. Muchos de los Escaladores de arboles y trabajadores en Arboricultura hablan Español solamente asi que es bueno tener este nuevo lugar. Ademas esta Organizacion tiene "Internacional" en su nombre. Espero ver pronto algunos mensajes en Portugues, Frances e Italiano.

English Version for Patty;

It is good to have a site on the Web where we can see information in several languages. Many of the Tree Climbers and Arboriculture Workers speak Spanish only so it is good to have this new multilingual site. Also, This Organization has the word "International " as it's name. I hope to soon see postings in Portugues, French and Italian.

Gracias!

=====

Well said!

Posted by Treeman - 10/06/2005 02:47pm

---

Well said everyone. Tree climbing occurs everywhere there are trees. I am very interested about trees of different countries and what lives in them.

Lets hear from those that climb these trees too. I know we have much in common.

=====