
climbers in the sf bay area?

Posted by guyntree - 03/01/2008 10:38pm

I am looking for some tree climbers to hook up with in the bay area. For the past two years I have been climbing for work and I am really interested in climbing just for fun. I have some experience rock climbing, and a lot more in caving vertical techniques.

Well look who it is!! Joe how the heck are you? Hows was the training in Ohio for the past month? Let me know if you ever want to go climb. If you know of any big trees we can do I can come down for a weekend. Tell everyone in the office hi for me. It was great getting to work with you guys last year. A good change of pace if you know what i mean.

I'm not in the bay, but may be spending more time there in the near future. I live in Truckee, and would love to climb with you. I have several favorite trees around tahoe that I have permanant lines set up in!

Hey Matt-

What's up man. Hope things are well with work and all that. I tell ya never get off hourly. It's a sham. I work twice as many hours and get paid less. No good man for sure. So I definitely missed the climbing comp. Did you go how was it? This guy just got in touch with me about climbing in the bay area and he says he has fixed ropes in some trees around tahoe. We should hook up with him sometime and go climbing. I got a chance to climb last week in a park near my house. Nothing special, just an 85 ft live oak in the forest. No views but fun anyways. I'm gonna talk to this guy and see if we can all hook up for a climb in the near future.

Hey Brendan

Yea I would definitely like to hook up sometime to climb. I'm up in the sierras all the time so the fixed rope thing sounds sweet. Haven't found to many trees around the bay to climb yet but am still on the prowl. Just climbed a couple 80-90 ft live oaks near my house in a park, but nothing too big. But yea we should go for a climb soon. I also have a buddy that i work with who is definitely down for a climb as well.
